Victor Emanuel at Windsor Castle. The most punctilious of existing courts is swaiting the arrival of the most careless, "free sud easy" of sovereigns, the soldier King of Italy. It is just after the domestic losses which crowded thick upon him, and carried off his wife and his brother almost at the same time, and Europe's sympathy is very ready to pay sad and graceful homage to his bereavement. The Queen comes down, according to mmemorial custom, to the foot of the great staircase at Windsor, to welcome her brother sovereign. With certain personages, according to their respective ranks, the rule is that she comes one or more steps forward toward them across the room, where the presentation takes place; and when the anomalous though actual sovereign of imperial France proposed to visit England, there was some hesitation at court as to what precedent to follow. A Bonapartre might be a de facto emperor, but could never be a de jure brother sovereign; besides which, the Queen's personal prejudices were strongly enlisted against Napoleon III. When the meeting took place, however, between the selfmade ruler and his subject wife, and the hereditary bearer of such old ancestral honors that through Guelphs and Stuarts she claimed even the mediæval honors of the Bruces, all prejudice melted and all embarrassment disappeared. There was no longer any sease of derogation in the personal contact which was to seal the political alliance; the indeheable and irresistible charms of the courteous Emperor, the graceful tact and deference shown by the Empress of the Freuch, overcame all insular as well as hereditary rancor. With the present visitor, Victor Emanuel, the case was very different. Of a rate in whose veins flowed Stuart blood, and of vessels.

Queen Victoria's sympathies. As she met him at the foot of the great staircase, and took his arm to go up to the drawingroom, she alluded delicately to his latest loss, that of his brother. His rather vacant countenance surprised her. and still more was she shocked when he answered awkwardly, in exeerable French, "Ah! oui, pauvre diable, il est mort." ("Yes, poor devil, he is dead!") Her estimate of his character was further shaken by his request on Saturday night to be even into London the next morning, where be meant to attend high mass in his own, "Sardisian chapel," a church so called from having been originally built under the protection and for the use of the Sardinian legation. The poor Queen expected to see the King of Italy ake a stand and proclaim what seemed to be his principles, by attending the Episcopal sertice in the palace chapel. But the soldier hiog had not the "courage of his opinions," as the French so pithily express it-or rather he had no opinions, and in his outward policy followed the advice of his ministers. while in his private life the instincts of his race and education kept him firm in the faith of his ancestors. -October Galaxy.

VIRGINIANS.-The great mass of people in this State were born here. There have been few additions to the population, comparatively speaking, by foreign immigration, and quite as lew by settlers from the North. Yet new-comers have a full and fair share in the offices, and are as generally successful as native Virginians in business pursuits. Right here in Richmond one can look around him and see that the place efa man's birth is no prejudice to him, notwithstanding the popular impression to the worrary. Gov. Gilbert C. Walker, the most Joyular Chief Magistrate Virginia ever had, is New Yorker, and came to the State since the war. Gen. Wm. C. Newberry, Superintendent of Public Buildings of the State, is also a New Yorker, and commanded a brigade in the Uni ed States army during the war; Gen. John K. Connelly, one of the senators representing Richmend in the Senate, is a North Carolinian; Mayor Authory M. Keiley was born in New Jersey, though nearly all his life has been spent in Virginia; Gen. P. T. Moore, Sergeant of the city (the best office in the State), is a native of Ireland; Mr. John Regnault, Collector of City Taxes, was born in Maryland; and so on in fair proportion with minor offices, with the city councilmen and justices of the peace. These mentioned gentlemen were all elected by the Conservatives; they rank among the ablest, purest, and best of our citizens; where they came from is never thought of, and there are thousands in our midst who really do not know but that they are F. F. V.'s of the most aristoeratic type. As for business men, Franklin Steams, Col. Albert Ordway, John B. Davis, and E. O. Notting are enough to mention to demonstrate that the pettiness of inquiring a man's birthplace, and disliking him because he is not a son of "the sacred soil," is not and tever has been a characteristic of our people. They welcome here all who come-whether from foreign shores, or northern, western, or southern States. They are called and consid tred "Virginians" after they have, with bona bie interest, established their home here and become good members of society. - Richmond Cor. Cincinnati Commercial.

A NEW WAY OF GETTING A PAIR OF SHOES. It is recorded that a certain impecunious man who boards around in the second district was some days ago aroused to the melancholy fact that he was almost shoeless. The matter was one of painful interest to him, and he pondered ing and deeply on the way he should evercome the mistortune of a depleted purse, and at last he got an idea - an unusual thing for him, but Strange to say, it was a briliant one. With be assurance of a man with a well-filled pocket be entered a shoe store and had his measure taken for a covering for his foundations. The obliging Crispin received particular instructions as to the manner and style of the make, and his new-found customer left, but only to enter another store some squares below, where the tame performance was gone through. In time both pairs of shoes were made, and the shoeless han, with the dignity of a free and respectable clizen and a legal voter, called on shoemaker 10. 1, tried on the right-foot shoe, and came to the conclusion that it might fit better if he had on a pair of socks. Would the sheemaker be so obliging as to let him take the one shoe too happy, and the purchaser left, and No. 2 has visited. From him the left shoe was oblained in the same manner, completing the latt. There are two mad men down town, and if the shoe-nurshasing a hand men down town, and if the shoe-nurshasing a hand men down town, and if the shoe-nurshasing a hand men down town, and if the shoe-nurshasing a hand men down town, and if the shoe-nurshasing a hand not show that the boundary of the shoe hand not show that the boundary of the shoe has a shoe hand not show that the boundary of the shoe has a shoe hand not show that the boundary of the shoe has a shoe hand not show that the boundary of the shoe has a shoe hand not show that the boundary of the shoe has a shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe has a shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe has a shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe had not show the shoe had not show that the boundary of the shoe had not show the shoe ha if the shoe-purchasing chap ever crosses the way of either there will be trouble.—New Or- SODA WATER at WARFIELD & HALL'S.
